Proactive FF&E Budgeting Saves Time and Money

DOTI Helps Architects, Engineers, Designers, and Clients Avoid Costly Mistakes

[Ponte Vedra Beach, FL] – Prior proper planning helps you avoid poor results. How many times have we heard that advice? DOTI Global Sourcing puts this practice to work while it assists architects, engineers, space planners, and designers with the important furniture, fixtures, and equipment (FF&E) budgeting process before it's too late.

DOTI is a proud member of organizations like the American Institute of Architects, where its services are valued by the members. “We hear time and again how the architect has designed a beautiful building only to find sub-standard furnishings placed at the last minute due to budget constraints”, says W. Cliff Oxford, DOTI’s Vice-President of National Sales & Merchandising.

“By helping the architect or designer at the beginning of the process develop a menu of options for the end user, DOTI provides a valuable service that ensures the integrity of the final project. We can work side by side as part of the team to help everyone gain comfort with what the FF&E might entail before the money is allocated”, he says. The entire process is more efficient and eliminates surprises at the end, something everyone appreciates.

DOTI has been in business since 1983 and has manufacturing partners throughout the world that enable it to work on the client’s behalf to source, procure, or install everything from furniture, lighting, window treatment, accessories, carpet, office systems, and other FF&E items for their facility. DOTI can provide complete, turn-key design services or simply source the items already specified by the space planner or designer on-site.
